Unhappy at work? Don't worry, you're not alone

Los Angeles Times

Seven out of 10 workers have “checked out” at work or are “actively disengaged,” according to a recent Gallup survey.

In its ongoing survey of the American workplace, Gallup found that only 30 percent of workers are “were engaged, or involved in, enthusiastic about, and committed to their workplace.” Although that equals the high in engagement since Gallup began studying the issue in 2000, it is overshadowed by the number of workers who aren't committed to performing at a high level—which Gallup says costs companies money.

The poll, released last week, examined worker engagement beginning in 2010 and ending in 2012. The previous poll period covered 2008 through 2010.

The survey classifies three types of employees among the 100 million people in America who hold full-time jobs. The first is actively engaged, which represents about 30 million workers. The second type of worker is “not engaged,” which accounts for 50 million. These employees are going through the motions at work.

The third type, labeled “actively disengaged,” hates going to work. These workers—about 20 million—undermine their companies with their attitude, according to the report.

“The general consciousness about the importance of employee engagement seems to have increased in the past decade,” said Jim Harter, Gallup's chief scientist for workplace management and well-being. “But there is a gap between knowing about engagement and doing something about it in most American workplaces.”

Gallup estimates that workers who are actively disengaged cost the U.S. as much as $550 billion in economic activity yearly. The level of employee engagement over the past decade has been largely stagnant, according to researchers.

The report found that different age groups and those with higher education levels reported more discontent with their workplace. Millennials and baby boomers, for instance, are more likely to be “actively disengaged” than other age groups. Employees with college degrees also are more likely to be running on autopilot at work.

WHAT KIND OF EMPLOYEE ARE YOU?

If you're working, you probably fall into one of these categories, according to Gallup.

ENGAGED

Work with passion and feel a sense of connection to their jobs

NOT ENGAGED

Put time—but not passion or energy—toward their work

ACTIVELY DISENGAGED

Busy acting out their unhappiness at work

CTA Red Line progress report

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 @tracyswartz
 @tribune.com
 @tracyswartz

Four more months! Wednesday marks one month since the CTA began overhauling the Red Line between Cermak-Chinatown and 95th Street.

The project, which shuttered nine stations, is on schedule to be completed by Oct. 19, the CTA said.

Demolition is nearly done and new construction will begin soon, CTA spokeswoman Tammy Chase said. Station overhaul also continues, including work that will allow new elevators to be built at the 87th, 63rd and Garfield stations, Chase said.

In the meantime, riders have flocked to the free shuttles that are picking up at closed Red Line stations and dropping off at the Garfield Green Line station.

The CTA said it has seen additional entries at South Side Green Line stations beyond Garfield, as well as a increase of traffic on the Orange Line.

On the bus side, the CTA said it has recorded higher passenger counts on the No. 3-King Drive, No. 4-Cottage Grove, No. 8A-South Halsted, No. 9 Ashland, No. J14-Jeffery Jump, No. 24-Wentworth and No. 29-State Street buses.

One fear that Green Line riders had about the project was an increase in crime as Red Line riders were shuttled to the Green Line.

Chicago police have issued community alerts in the last month about iPhone and other thefts on and near Green Line stations.

On Sunday, police issued an alert for robberies in the area between the Garfield Red and Garfield Green Line stops.

Police said a man attacked and robbed a victim at noon, June 3 in the 3500 block of South LaSalle Street; and then again at 1 a.m., June 8, in the first block of West Garfield Boulevard.

Anyone with information about these reported incidents should call detectives at (312) 747-8380.

The "CTA hasn't seen any changes from typical crime levels," Chase said.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Midway Orange Line

The train to and from Midway airport is one of the best deals in town—if you can catch it. While the CTA this year began charging Blue Line riders who don't have Chicago Cards or unlimited passes $5 to ride from the O'Hare airport, the ride to and from Midway has remained $2.25. The only problem is that it doesn't have the hours that the O'Hare station enjoys. The Blue Line runs 24 hours a day, which is helpful for late-night and early-morning O'Hare travelers.

Unfortunately, early-bird and last-call travelers have a tougher time at Midway. Trains leave the Midway station for the Loop from about 4 a.m. (4:30 on weekends) to about 1 a.m. Trains run from Clark/Lake to the Midway station from at about 4:30 a.m. (5 a.m. on weekends) to about 1:30 a.m.

Some flights at Midway depart from Chicago at 5:30 a.m., while others land at 1 a.m.

SUMMER CHALLENGE!

#REDEYECHECKLIST

Looking for something to do this summer in Chicago? How about 25 somethings?

The sunshine season is fleeting around here, so we want to help you make the best of it. Take part in our 2013 RedEye Summer Checklist challenge! Here's how it works:

- 1 Meet a challenge on our checklist.
- 2 Prove it: Take a photo. Tag us in it on Instagram or Twitter, use hashtag: #redeyechallenge; tag "RedEye" in your Facebook photo. (Be sure to tell us which challenge you've completed!)
- 3 We'll pick a few challengers every month to win canvas prints of their photos.
- 4 We'll share some of our favorite submissions on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter.

SAMPLING OF THE CHECKLIST

Ride the Water Taxi to Chinatown ... it's only $6 from downtown!

Guzzle beers at Gene's Sausage Shop's rooftop garden ... best views from Lincoln Square.

Grill on the beach ... you can do it at Montrose.

Catch the fireworks at Navy Pier ... and then never go back.

They may not be the most difficult challenges, but they'll definitely be a lot of fun. Our staff will also be playing along, so look out for the RedEye challengers to keep your own progress in check. The challenge ends in September. Recruit your friends, and get to summering!

Chief Keef leaves the Cook County Circuit Courthouse in Skokie on Monday after pleading guilty to speeding charges. ALEX GARCIA/TRIBUNE

Chief Keef vs. the law

Rapper arrested minutes after pleading guilty to speeding charge

Chicago Tribune

Monday was not a good day for rapper Chief Keef.

It started with him being served with his second paternity suit in a year as he waited outside a Skokie courtroom, where a brief time later he pleaded guilty to speeding along the Edens Expressway.

Shortly after he left the courthouse, police arrested him on a month-old trespassing complaint.

Chicago police officers came 26 miles from the South Side to arrest the 17-year-old rapper—whose real name is Keith Cozart—a few blocks from the courthouse on the misdemeanor charge and took him into custody.

Chief Keef's lawyer, Leah Starkman, said his client has been under scrutiny from law enforcement for some time.

"His management believes he's being harassed by the police," said Starkman, who only recently began representing the rapper and is unfamiliar with his criminal history. "I know that's he's on the police radar, but I don't know if it's harassment."

The rapper had just left the north suburban courthouse when Chicago police officers from the Grand Crossing District tactical team arrested him at 12:25 p.m., authorities said. The arrest stems from a complaint made by a security guard from the Parkway Gardens housing complex in Woodlawn on May 16.

Chief Keef, who has been arrested several times recently, had just pleaded guilty to driving at 110 mph in a 55 mph zone along the Edens and was scolded by the judge, who ordered him not to drive.

PATERNITY CASE

Also Monday, the rapper was served with his second paternity case. His first paternity case, which is pending, was filed in December by a different woman. Starkman said the latest paternity suit alleges that her client is the biological father of a little girl.

"You think you're invincible, and you're certainly not," said Cook County Circuit Court Judge Earl Hoffenberg. "Violate [conditions of the plea agreement] and you'll find out you're not. ... I sure hope I don't see you again, because if I do, you better be ready to go to jail."

The judge fined him $531, put him on probation for 18 months, ordered him to perform 60 hours of community service and undergo random drug testing. He must also complete eight hours of traffic school.

Jackson Jr.: I want to go to jail first

Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON Lawyers for former Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr., who will be sentenced July 3 for looting his campaign treasury of about $750,000, said Monday that if both Jackson and his wife, Sandi Jackson, are sent to prison, he'd like to serve first.

In a filing in federal court, his lawyers also said Jackson Jr., 48, has no income other than Social Security payments and a federal pension.

"If he serves his period of incarceration first, Mrs. Jackson would be able to work and could stabilize the family's finances," they said.

The family is "in significant financial peril," according to his lawyers, who said his "health issues preclude him from working at this time." Earlier, his lawyers said he suffers from severe depression and bipolar disorder.

Jackson Jr. began a medical leave of absence last June, won re-election in November and resigned later that month.

As sentencing nears, his mental health and financial situation are being debated because federal prosecutors want Jackson Jr. to forfeit $750,000 and to make restitution of $750,000.

Snowden hits back at critics of NSA leaks

5 WASHINGTON The former National Security Agency contractor who revealed the government's top-secret monitoring of Americans' phone and Internet data fought back against his critics Monday, saying the government's "litany of lies" about the programs compelled him to act.

Edward Snowden told an online forum run by Britain's Guardian newspaper that he considered it an honor to be called a traitor by people like former Vice President Dick Cheney, and he urged President Obama to "return to sanity" and roll back the surveillance effort.

Taking questions from readers and journalists, Snowden talked about his motivations and reaction to the debate raging about the damage or virtue of the leaks. Snowden remains in hiding, reportedly in Hong Kong.

Snowden said disillusionment with Obama contributed to his decision but there was no single event that led him to leak details about the vast monitoring of Americans' activity.

THE GOVERNMENT'S REACTION

General Keith Alexander, director of the NSA, will testify Tuesday at a House of Representatives Intelligence Committee hearing on the programs. Officials have promised to make public details on some of the thwarted attacks, and a U.S. government source familiar with the matter said more than 25 cases were on a list that spy agencies were trying to declassify for Tuesday's hearing.

Snowden referred to Director of National Intelligence James Clapper's testimony to Congress in March that such a program did not exist, saying that seeing him "baldly lying to the public without repercussion is the evidence of a subverted democracy. The consent of the governed is not consent if it is not informed."

The Justice Department has opened a criminal investigation into Snowden's actions, and U.S. officials promised last week to hold him accountable for the leaks.

U.S., Russia disagree on Syria

6 The United States and Russia still don't see eye to eye on Syria, Russian President Vladimir Putin said Monday, but "all of us have the intention to stop the violence in Syria ... and to solve this situation peacefully." Putin said he and President Obama "agreed to push the parties to the negotiating table."

Strikes add to Turkish protests

7 Turkish trade unions put fresh pressure on the country's prime minister Monday with a nationwide strike after a weekend of violent unrest in major cities. Protesters remained sharply critical of Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan, but it appeared the demonstrations might be losing momentum.

Mandela is 'doing better'

8 Former South African leader Nelson Mandela "is doing better," his grandson said Saturday, according to South Africa's national news agency. Mandela, 94, has been in serious but stable condition since being rushed to a Pretoria hospital June 8 with a recurring lung infection.

Supreme Court invalidates Ariz. law

9 The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday struck down an Arizona law that required people registering to vote in federal elections to show proof of citizenship, a victory for activists who said it had discouraged Native Americans and Latinos from voting.

THE DIGIT

38 That's how many years former labor leader Jimmy Hoffa has been missing. On Monday, the FBI started digging in suburban Detroit, attempting to find his remains.

2013 Stanley Cup Playoffs

HAWKS

STANLEY CUP FINALS • GAME 3

THE HAT TRICK

WHAT'S BUZZIN' IN THE BLACKHAWKS' WORLD

Defending her Hawkdom

Katie Chang,

the 18-year-old Winnetka native star of Sofia Coppola's "The Bling Ring" (opening Friday), is a huge Hawks fan. Her co-workers, however, found her hockey passion "weird." "One time we were shooting until 1 a.m. and I was just watching on a really crummy livestream on my phone," Chang recalls of the Hawks' 2012 playoff series against Phoenix. "[I was] shouting at the screen. People thought I was crazy."

Kaner and his buns

DMK Burger Bar in Lakeview is serving a burger named after Patrick Kane that will be available until the end of the Stanley Cup Final, reports the Tribune's Luis Gomez. "The Patrick Kane" features blue cheese dressing, chili-rubbed onion strings, shaved celery and—in honor of Kane's Buffalo, N.Y., roots—buffalo sauce.

Dunkin' boots Boston

If you're craving a Boston Kreme from Dunkin' Donuts, you're out of luck right now. In honor of the Blackhawks facing the Boston Bruins in the Stanley Cup Final, the Massachusetts-based company has temporarily rebranded the Boston Kreme the "Chicago Kreme." So if the Hawks win the series, does the name stick?

BLACKHAWKS VS. BOSTON

(Boston leads series 2-1)

Game 1: Blackhawks 4, Bruins 3 (OT)

Game 2: Bruins 2, Blackhawks 1 (OT)

Game 3: Bruins 2, Blackhawks 0

Game 4: at Bruins, 7 p.m. Wednesday, NBC

Game 5: at Blackhawks, 7 p.m. Saturday, NBC

Game 6*: at Bruins, 7 p.m. June 24, NBC

Game 7*: at Blackhawks, 7 p.m. June 26, NBC

Where would the Hawks have been without goaltender Corey Crawford in the first period? Down a whole bunch of goals, that's where. US PRESSWIRE

Andrew Shaw sacrifices his face to Kaspars Daugavins' elbow, resulting in a Hawks power play. Not that it mattered. The Hawks haven't scored with a man advantage since Bush was president. The first one. GETTY IMAGES

MONDAY'S GAME Bruins 2, Blackhawks 0

The hits. The saves. The goals. The celebrations. The facial hair.

With the Stanley Cup Final shifting to Boston for Game 3 on Monday, there was no shortage of memorable moments from the showdown between the Blackhawks and Bruins.

There also was no Marian Hossa. The star Hawks forward participated during warm-ups Monday but did not play; Ben Smith took his place; he had not played since April 27.

Smith did his best, but the Hawks' effort was dismal all the way around. Here are the images that caught our eye. REDEYE

Daniel Paille ended Game 2 with a goal, and he put the Bruins up 1-0 in Game 3. Both tallies came off horrible turnovers. Ugh. SCOTT STRAZZANTE/TRIBUNE

DOWN goes Marcus Kruger, drawing a penalty. If only the Hawks knew what to do with it. GETTY IMAGES

Yeah, Bryan Bickell getting pummeled by Zdeno Chara (center) and Richard Seidenberg. Sums up the Hawks' night. REUTERS

Yeesh, the Bruins look like world-beaters right now. Maybe Game 4 will be better. GETTY IMAGES

1	What's wrong with the Blackhawks' power play?	They should fix it by pretending they are penalty killing?	Refs have started noticing how many men are on the ice.	I'm using it to charge my phone. Sorry, guys.	I'm blaming everything that happened Saturday on the presence of Jim Belushi.	More people on the ice means more tired players for the 12th overtime.
2	Being a goaltender in a Stanley Cup Final is like ...	... being a bartender in Miami after that Heat loss. Lots of shots!	... being Kanye's waiter at a French restaurant.	... being the lonely friend at the bar, way too many clothes/ block every shot.	... trying to watch "According to Jim": Painful, frenetic and scarring for life.	... being 2 Chainz's bodyguard ... blocking lots of shots!
3	What's the key to maintaining a playoff beard?	Realizing that your guy friends are more impressed than your lady friends.	Being single.	You gotta let them know BEFORE the Brazilian you don't want it touched.	Constant stroking. Of the beard, I mean.	Exfoliants and a baby comb.
4	How could other Chicago teams get noticed during the Stanley Cup Final?	Playoff beards and playoff-caliber teams? Just sayin' ...	Fitted Cap Day.	I'm putting Cubs hats on the Art Institute lions personally.	Put in a crappy closer and have him blow a three-run lead.	Hire Tim Tebow.
5	If your college had a fragrance, what would it smell like?	Lollipops and Now & Laters. Pitt is a like a candy store for teenage guys. (Subliminal recruiting.)	Guilt.	Sam Jackson's anger and Dr. Martin Luther King's dress shirts! Go Morehouse College!	SIU? You know that smell when people don't shower, smoke pot, and drink Honey Brown? Yeah, that one.	Zima, Zubaz and debt. (It was the '90s).

FIRED CSN REPORTER BOUNCES BACK IN WAKE OF WHIRLWIND EPISODE

Chicago Tribune

When the NHL playoffs started, Comcast SportsNet Chicago dismissed reporter Susannah Collins after Blackhawks Chairman Rocky Wirtz objected to the station—partially owned by the Hawks and three other Chicago teams—about satirical videos she shot four years ago that pushed the boundaries of acceptability.

In a River West coffee shop over the weekend, Collins addressed the episode for the first time publicly with the understanding that terms of an agreement with CSN prevented her from discussing certain details. Collins came across in a 30-minute interview with the Tribune more buoyant about the future than bitter about the past.

What have you been doing the past six weeks?

The first couple weeks were a blur. I sort of checked out because it was everywhere. I got out of town, spent a lot of time with my family. I turned off my phone, avoided Twitter and didn't listen to talk radio. I hunkered down and spent time with my family. When you go through something like that, you need all the support you can get. Once things died down, I tried to get back to normal.

I was surprised at the support for you in this market. What was your reaction to the reaction?

I was blown away. I had no idea that it was a story so many people would care about. Then there was this wave of support. The people who reached out to me ... former bosses, former colleagues, college professors who I had years ago, friends who I went to grade school with who I hadn't seen in years. The Chicago media was so supportive and something I'm so grateful for because it was so difficult. It provided some validation for myself that I really needed at that point because, inevitably, you lose your job.

In your time of introspection the past six weeks, did you have any sense of remorse?

That's a tough one for me to answer. Anybody who's ever read anything about me knows those videos are very much a part of my journey and my story. I got my first gig in the industry, "Inside the NFL," as a result of those videos. So anytime anybody asks me how I got my start, inevitably I refer to these videos. ... I never wanted anyone to be offended. I felt horrible if people were. ... It was meant to be a scripted, satirical thing.

Looking broader, in your job there's a role of journalist and a role of entertainer. Objectively, you blurred the line a little bit, didn't you?

Oh, for sure. But I don't think we did those videos with the intent of them being hard-hitting journalism.

Do you think, moving forward, that anything you have done would affect your ability to go into a locker room and be taken seriously as a journalist?

I don't think so. For 2 1/2 years I was working consistently. It wasn't an issue. The job with CSN, I had such a strange trajectory, an unconventional one. That was the job I really wanted. It gave me this platform to do so many things. I graduated with a broadcast journalism degree, so those skills were there. I had an opportunity to cut my teeth in the best sports town in the world, and I'm pretty proud of the work I did there. ... The body of work I put together in a short time will help me. It's a positive thing.

How much do you think you were a victim of your own success?

I think the more popular I became and more people came to know me as a personality on CSN, the interest goes up. That's inevitable. But I never feared that. ... I didn't anticipate having to address [the videos] ever.

Susannah Collins
HUCCIO DIMUZZO/TRIBUNE FILE

Do you still watch the Hawks?

I'll be honest. I cannot watch a full broadcast. I equate it to going through a breakup and then watching your former partner do really well and succeed without you. It's those kind of feelings.

Some people are like, "You must hate that team," but for me it's separate. I'm a Chicago gal, a Chicago sports fan. I want the Blackhawks to win the Stanley Cup because I know how much it would mean to the city. I would never root against them. But in terms of watching, the wound is still too fresh.

So you're not trying to put the so-called "Susannah Collins Curse" on them?

[Laughs.] Somebody texted me, "You know, people are talking about a Susannah Collins Curse," and I was like, "Great, me and the freaking Billy Goat. Awesome." That's exactly how I want to be remembered in Chicago.

When you look back at this episode in 10 years, how do you think you will view it?

I'm going to take it and learn from it. I don't know that I'll ever look back and laugh about it, but many people have told me this: Ultimately this could be a real good thing. Maybe not even careerwise, but just going through this and emerging from it and knowing I'll be OK. ...

I'm excited. I truly am. I can look at you right now and say I have no idea where I'll be in the next six months, but in a way, that's kind of exciting. Whatever the next chapter is will be a really good one.

SOUND BOARD

KEEPING YOU PLUGGED IN TO TODAY'S MOST BUZZWORTHY MUSIC

Kelly Rowland
GETTY IMAGES

ALBUM REVIEW

Talk a Good Game

songs. Or she may have put out some slick, branded content to coincide with her debut as a judge on "X Factor."

Yet while Rowland's presence has never been more strongly felt in America's living rooms, the singles from her fourth album, "Talk a Good Game," have avoided polite platitudes—a tone that is frequently, if not always, matched on the rest of the album. The Mike Will Made It-produced "Kisses Down Low" brilliantly flips a syrupy ballad into a swaggering ode to oral sex in the vein of Three Six Mafia's "I'd Rather" and Shawna's "Gettin' Some." It's a fantastically bold reintroduction for those who haven't checked in on Rowland in a decade.

By Kyle Kramer

RED EYE SOUND BOARD
One can imagine an alternate reality in which Kelly Rowland might have spent the last few months playing it safe, coasting on the attention of the Destiny's Child Super Bowl reunion with straightforward, midtempo love

The truly breathtaking centerpiece of the album is the song that explores some of what happened in that period: the riveting, gut-wrenching "Dirty Laundry." Laying out the frank details of an abusive relationship—including its effect on Rowland's relationships with both her parents and Beyoncé—over a spare piano track, it's a uniquely therapeutic single that's impossible to tune out or turn away from.

At times, Rowland succumbs to a hint of adult-contemporary cheesiness. If you've ever wondered why no one's previously thought to combine Joni Mitchell's "Big Yellow Taxi" and Wiz Khalifa rapping, your answer is here. Mostly, though, the rest of the album shifts comfortably and successfully between the mellow vibes of post-Drake R&B (courtesy of Drake producers Boi-1da and T-Minus) and a few high-energy highlights like the mid-2000s pop of Pharrell-assisted "Street Life" or the Diddy-style electro 'n' B of "Freak."

An album that will please both those who have grown up alongside Rowland and those young enough to think of her as part of the canon, "Talk a Good Game" isn't always the safest move. As a result, it's the right one.

THERE SHE IS!

WHO'S THE REAL WINNER AT THE MISS USA PAGEANT?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Apologies, ladies and gents. We were not adequately prepared for the 2013 Miss USA pageant on Sunday night. Boy, was that a mistake. Miss Connecticut Erin Brady took home the crown, but as we learned in "Miss Congeniality," the superlatives are the most important part of the evening. We handed out our own special crowns to some of the evening's most notable stars. (Also, Miss USA and Miss America are NOT the same thing; one of them goes on to compete for Miss Universe, and the other might get to meet Mario Lopez.) DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

Most Jonas-est

Nick Jonas Sure, all three Jo-bros performed during Sunday's competition, but Nick served as the evening's tux-sporting host. He also told zap2it.com that "I am single at the moment, so I'm obviously very excited for this show," but we're not exactly sure how well that all worked out for him.

Most nakedest

Miss New York Joanna Nosuchinsky

Miss New York trotted out in what appeared to be two pillowcases belted together and all of the thighs in the Northeast. Your grandmother is watching this.

Most sportiest

Miss Illinois Stacie Juris and Miss Massachusetts Sarah Kidd

You know what the Miss USA pageant is really all about? Sports. You know what looks great without pants? A hockey sweater. The rest just kind of fills in the blanks for these ladies, who represent the Chicago Blackhawks and the Boston Bruins. They get $5 if they can tell us what icing is (no, not the cake kind).

Most smartest

Miss Utah Marissa Powell Remember Miss South Carolina Teen USA Caitlin Upton? The one who said things like "the U.S. Americans" and "the Iraq"? Miss Utah (near left) really gave Caitlin a run for her money Sunday night, with lines like "we need to—create education better so we can solve this problem" when asked about the gender gap in American wages. Her parents are very proud.

Most shiniest

Miss Illinois Stacie Juris

Miss Illinois also managed to win for most breastiest in both the evening gown and casino wear categories. Girl child, this is Miss USA, not tryouts to be a Rihanna backup dancer. Secure those nips before they slip.

red hot CHOOSE FUNNY

We've been waiting for a Flight of the Conchords tour for years, and even longer for a legitimate Dave Chappelle stand-up tour. Thanks for Funny or Die, we're going to see them on the same bill. The comedy website announced Monday its first-ever live tour, called "Funny Or Die Presents The Oddball Comedy & Curiosity Festival," which arrives at the First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre in Tinley Park on Aug. 31.

That's when Drake and Miguel will perform at the United Center. Tickets go on sale at 10 a.m. Friday.

Shirt happens

Another person doesn't want to be attached to Jon Gosselin. The former "Jon & Kate Plus 8" dad's penchant for wearing Ed Hardy shirts was the reason the brand sunk, Ed Hardy said. "That Jon Gosselin thing was the nail in the coffin," Hardy told the New York Post. "That's what tanked it. Macy's used to have a huge window display with Ed Hardy, and it filtered down and that's why Macy's dropped the brand."

Jenny from the mine

This could be really good or really, really bad: Jennifer Lopez and Antonio Banderas have signed on to star in a film about the trapped Chilean miners, thr.com reports. Martin Sheen also is on board "The 33," which begins filming in Chile in the fall.

REAL 'WORLD'

"Girl Meets World" is totally, officially happening. Disney Channel has given a full series order of the "Boy Meets World" follow-up with the debut planned for 2014, thr.com reports. Cory returns to the show as a history teacher, and Topanga owns a hangout known for its pudding. Mmm... pudding.
